Strasburg House, 2003

Historic Overview:

The Strasburg House was built by the Strasburg family, well-known Detroit dance teachers. Later the house was used as a private residence and music school. The house is located on the grounds of Wayne State University and is used as a music annex. The house was built in 1915 in the English Tudor style using brick and half-timbering details. Marcus R. Burrowes who had received his training at the Detroit firm of Stratton and Baldwin designed the house.¹
